The demand for Innovative Management in all spheres of human activity is enormous. The managerial challenges of 21st century cannot be expected to be met by the conventional management methods since the very perceptions and practices of management have undergone a total transformation.

Organizations, in particular, human organizations are complex systems. The problems concerning them are equally complex in nature and cannot be meaningfully addressed by simplistic methods.

Today, creativity has been identified to be the key corporate resource.

Organizations should find more innovative ways of co-recting new ideas across corporate, national and international boundaries as part of one innovation system.
